Healthcare system transformation after COVID-19

The NAM recently published the fourth of nine papers focused on opportunities for health system transformation after COVID-19. Clinicians and Professional Societies COVID-19 Impact Assessment: Lessons Learned and Compelling Needs provides a systematic review of the clinician experience during COVID-19, challenges encountered and lessons learned, and opportunities for reinforcing and transforming the clinician workforce after the pandemic recedes. The paper identifies long-standing structural challenges and identifies opportunities to close these gaps in the future. Please feel free to share this resource.
